SECTION A

Answer TWO questions from this section.

You should spend 60 minutes on this section.

You should include diagrams in your responses where appropriate.

- 1 'In large private sector organisations, such as McDonald's and Adidas, there is inevitably a separation between those who own the organisation and those who control it.'

Discuss how this divorce of ownership from control might influence the objectives of large private sector organisations.

(Total for Question 1 = 20 marks)

- 2 Window cleaners and hairdressers typically operate in monopolistically competitive markets.

To what extent might a monopolistically competitive market be more beneficial to consumers than a monopoly market?

(Total for Question 2 = 20 marks)

- 3 In New Zealand, two large supermarket firms, Foodstuffs and Progressive, control 95% of the market. This means that both firms have significant purchasing power over their suppliers.

Evaluate the likely impact of monopsony power on businesses and consumers.

(Total for Question 3 = 20 marks)

- 4 Fashionara, an Indian clothing and footwear retailer, went out of business in 2016.

Evaluate whether a firm should shut down if it cannot cover its costs of production.

(Total for Question 4 = 20 marks)

5 International business expansion

Extract 1 Charoen Pokphand Foods (CP Foods)

CP Foods is a large company based in Thailand. Before 2016 it had expanded mainly through a process of vertical integration. CP Foods started out as a food processing business but by 2016 its business activities included the manufacture of animal feed, animal farming, meat processing, food retailing and restaurants.

5

Although CP Foods' major markets are based in Thailand, the company started to expand into overseas markets, including the USA and Europe. In 2016 it completed a US$1 billion acquisition of the US frozen foods manufacturer Bellisio Parent. In 2017 it acquired a 33% stake in the Polish chicken processor SuperDrob Capital Group for US$52.8 million. This acquisition was the company's first investment into European-based poultry operations.

10

CP Foods plans to acquire the UK-based poultry company Westbridge Food Group (WFG) for US$74.9 million. WFG has over 100 subsidiaries that have poultry import licences in many European countries.

Extract 2 Transnational companies (TNCs) in China

China is amongst the world's fastest-growing economies and its inhabitants make up almost 20% of the global population. TNCs have been expanding rapidly in China including:

- US-based Yum! Brands which owns Pizza Hut, KFC and Taco Bell 5
- Japanese car manufacturers Toyota and Mitsubishi
- South Korean manufacturers Samsung, Hyundai and Kia.

China is the third largest foreign direct investment (FDI) destination in the world. In 2016, while global FDI flows fell by 13%, FDI inflows to China increased by 2.3%. In part, this was as a result of government tax incentives, the easing of investment restrictions and simplified company registration procedures. 10

However, FDI trends in 2017 show that foreign investors are taking a more cautious approach to investing in China. China's credit rating has been downgraded for the first time in over 25 years leading to a weakening of the exchange rate.

The economy's GDP growth rate has been declining. In 2010 China's economic growth rate was 10.6%, falling to 6.7% in 2016. China's manufacturing industries are becoming less internationally competitive as wage rates have been rising faster than labour productivity. 15

Extract 3 Transfer pricing in the UK

In 2015, as part of a European Union initiative, the UK Government adopted a tougher approach to TNCs in relation to transfer pricing. This started with Google's £130 million tax settlement after revelations that the company had been avoiding profit tax in the UK. 5

Starbucks faced protest campaigns from consumer pressure groups. Following this pressure Starbucks paid nearly as much profit tax in 2015 as it had in its first 14 years in the UK. However, the company continues to be criticised for a lack of transparency, making it hard to determine whether it is paying the correct amount of profit tax.

In 2016 there was a 15% reduction in the number of UK Government investigations into TNCs suspected of transfer pricing. This may have been because TNCs were becoming less aggressive in the methods they use to reduce their UK tax liabilities. It appeared that some TNCs were concerned about the impact of negative publicity over the use of transfer pricing. 10

Nevertheless, it was too early to conclude that the Government's new policy on tax avoidance was going to be effective in the longer term. 15

6 The UK energy market

(Source: https://www.ofgem.gov.uk/data-portal/all-charts?search_api_views_fulltext=gas+market+share)

Extract 1 Consumer loyalty schemes

British Gas is spending £100 million on a loyalty programme that offers new deals to existing customers. The promotion means that customers can choose from a range of incentives for staying loyal to the company. These include larger discounts on their gas bills, reduced subscription fees for Sky TV and lower prices for home insurance. A spokesperson for British Gas said that the company will improve customer service in all areas of the business including maintenance of customer home appliances, such as cookers and boilers, and after-sales service.

5

Other large companies in the market, including npower and EDF, are planning to introduce similar loyalty schemes. However, the Chief Executive of Citizens Advice, a UK consumer welfare group, said, "While offering rewards is one way to acknowledge how valuable loyal customers are, bringing down bills would make a bigger difference to more people's household finances."

Extract 2 New entrant to the market

People's Energy (PE) has received approval from Ofgem, the UK energy regulator, to start providing energy to UK consumers from the beginning of August 2017. The two co-founders of PE were so disappointed by the price rises of the 'Big Six' energy firms that they decided to start up their own energy company.

5

The ethically-minded energy firm, which uses only renewable sources of energy, aims to return 75% of its profits back to its customers. PE will also provide free shares to those consumers that remain with the company. Consumers will also have representation on the Board of Directors.

One of the co-founders said, "Energy comes from natural resources that should belong to us all, not private entities. We are absolutely passionate about returning ownership of this natural resource to consumers."

10

(Source: adapted from <http://www.fifetoday.co.uk/news/couple-launch-energy-firm-to-challenge-the-big-six-1-4440908>)

Extract 3 Government intervention

The UK Government is planning to set maximum prices for electricity and gas. The proposed intervention was welcomed by consumer groups and small energy firms. The Managing Director of energy firm First Utility criticised the 'Big Six' energy companies for keeping loyal customers on over-priced tariffs.

5

However, a spokesperson for one of the big energy companies stated that a maximum price would be bad for consumers as it would lead to a fall in the number of firms in the market.

There are several incentives available to encourage consumers to switch to cheaper energy suppliers, but the proportion who do switch is still relatively low. By providing consumers with more information, Ofgem aims to make it easier for consumers to find cheaper deals on price comparison websites.
